The Murano does not start...The dash lights go on and the gages are normal, radio works but it's like the Murano does not recognize the pedal is pressed. BUT then the lights do not turn off. So I must disconnect the negative to the battery to turn off the lights. I have replaced the brake sensor and cruise sensor under the steering wheel. Help!

murano ehps power steering pump kit the listing has instructions and the O-rings are made from viton which is supposedly better than the original stuff make sure you use the correct nissan e-psf fluid. from my understanding, this is a different fluid than regular power steering atf fluid and is part of the problem.. apparently degrades the ...

Ok, it said nissan power steering fluid or equivalent. So what exactly is equivalent if not the red type power steering fluid off the shelf or the dexron type atf that says on the psf reservoir cover. If nissan psf is not atf thus not dexron type, then it is a power steering fluid similar to the one off the auto parts shelf.

Wow, this is the same problem I'm having!! A few months ago, I noticed that there was a slow power steering fluid leak. I took my car in to the mechanic to have a new high pressure hose put in. He took it to "house of hose" to have it repaired. Ever since then, my Murano has been groaning when I turn the wheel to the right.

Step 3: Fill reservoir back up. Now grab steering wheel and turn wheels back and forth, barely touching the stops, at a medium-slow speed. This is going to move the fluid through the system. Step 4: Repeat steps 2 and 3 until the fluid in the reservoir matches the new fluid coming out of the bottle. I used less than 3 quarts of fluid on mine.
