The potential for solar energy to be harnessed as solar power is enormous, since about 200,000 times the world's total daily electric-generating capacity is received by Earth every day in the form of solar energy. Unfortunately, though solar energy itself is free, the high cost of its collection, conversion, and storage still limits its exploitation in many places.

Net Energy Metering (NEM) is a billing arrangement offered by many utilities that allows homeowners and businesses to earn credits for excess solar energy generated by their solar panel system. These credits can then be used to offset energy costs when solar panels are not generating enough electricity, such as at night or during cloudy weather.
